Sometimes I think it's weird when people move back in with their parents, and instead of telling it like it is, say, "I found a free place," which, while technically true, conjures imagery of said person living in some super cool squat, or living in their significant other's van, shaking the windchimes as they screw. And likes to keep joking about how they have scabies but you never really know for sure, so you always put down a towel before you sit on the couch? I'm sure they're not that bad. And what other roommate will bring you your rash cream or your favorite
